Arlington Cemetery Plans an Expansion

WASHINGTON, May 2 (WP). Arlington National Cemetery, America's most famous military burial ground, which has suffered from a shortage of space for new plots the last few years, has announced plans for an expansion that will increase available burial sites to almost 20 times the presant number.

The cemetery, started 110 years ago when Robert E. Lee's estate. was seized by the federal government during the Civil War, contains the bodies of 162,669 servicemen and their families. But only 7,300 plots, each able to hold two or more bodies, are still avail-

The 135-member assembly shunted aside a U.S. plan for a $4-billion aid program for countries whose economies have been the most seriously crippled by the recent rises in fuel and food The program adopted also authorized a special emergency aid program, but it linked it with a declaration of principles for a new international economic order and an action program to put those principles into effect. The goal is a new deal for the underdeveloped nations: better

Mr. Sadat is quoted as saying, "I am eager not to sever the thread with the Scriets' now, even though he expressed considerable dismay with Soviet behavior.

After Israel's victory in the six-day 1967 war. Mr. Sadat said in the account, the Soviet Union came to Egypt's aid when "everything on the land of Egypt was bleeding" and Egypt had "neither planes nor air bases" left.

Egypt "had absolute confidence in the Russians" then, Mr. Sadat said, and even asked them "to appoint a Soviet commander for the Egyptian Air Force," but "they refused.

The Soviet Union supplied Egypt initially with all its military requirements. Mr. Sadat said, but then President Gamal Abdel Nasser told Yugoslavian President Tito that the Russian "method was rough..." Reliving His 'First Crisis'

Nixon, in Watergate Talks, Often Referred to Hiss Case

By Linda Mathews

WASHINGTON, May 2.—The name of Alger Hiss pops up again and again in the transcripts of President Nixon's private Watergate conversations.

The former State Department official, convicted in 1950 of lying to a federal grand jury about leaking secret government documents, may have been relegated to the history books, as far as most people are concerned. But to President Nixon, who won na-tional recognition during the congressional investigation of Hiss, his quarry is still very real.

According to the Watergate transcripts, Mr. Nixon occasional-ly relives the Hiss battle 25 years later, regaling his young aides with all the details and drawing analogies to Watergate. Detective Work

On Feb. 28, 1973, as he conulted with John Dean 3d about he Senate Watergate commit-.ce's forthcoming hearings, Mr. Nixon suddenly reminisced about he Hiss investigation. The Presient suggested that Dean "go back and read Chapter One of Six Crises." his book on his Reflecting further on the Hiss case in the same conversation, Mr. Nixon compared his detective work with that of the Watergate committee.

"I conducted that investigation with two [characterization omitted] committee investigators that stupid," he said. "They were tenacions. We got it done." Mr. Nixon held up the Hiss hearings as an example later in the same meeting as he talked of the need to convince Sm. Howard Baker, jr. R-Tenn., that the Watergate hearings should be run like a court of law.

Tell them that is the way Nixon ran the Hiss case," the President said. The same point was made three weeks later as Mr. Nixon urged his top lieutenants to appeal to Sen. Sam Ervin jr., D-N.C., the Watergate committee chairman, to follow formal rules of evidence. Talk about the Hiss case," the President Instructed. Hiss surfaced again March 27.

1973, during a session about Jeb Magruder's obtaining immunity and turning government witness. Mr. Nixon reflected on the haz-ards that informers encounter. Destroyed by a Lie

"Hiss was destroyed because he lied," the President said, "[Whittaker! Chambers was destroyed because he was an informer," he added, referring to the witness who testified that Hiss had passed secret government documents to the Communist underground Hiss was cited again April 16, 1973, during a final discussion Dean's resignation as White House counsel and his future Watergate testimony. Dean said he was "incapable

"Thank God! Don't ever do John. Tell the truth. That is the thing I have told every-body around here. [Expletive omitted]. Tell the truth! ...

The transcripts portray Mr. Petersen as a dedicated prosecutor but determined to keep the scandal away from Mr. Nixon personally because he was convinced that Mr. Nixon was not involved Petersen Summaries

The transcripts included tape recordings of several conversations in which Mr. Petersen summarised for Mr. Nixon the grand jury ceedings in April, 1973. Asked why he did so, Mr. Pe-

On April 17, 1973, three days after former White House counse John Dean took his story to the Watergate prosecutors, Mr. Petersen met Mr. Nixon in the White House. According to the transcripts, Mr. Nixon made a major point to the prosecutorthat anything Dean knew he probably knew alone.

The transcriots also quote Dean as saying, in response to a Nixon question, that Mr. Peter-sen was a "soldier."

Longshoremen Halt Strike on West Coast

that the investigation was narrowed down to the very, very fine criminal thing, which was a break for us." The transcripts disclosed that Mr. Nixon at one point discussed adding Mr. Petersen, chief of the Justice Department's crime staff to handle the Watergate investigation.

Mr. Petersen said that the proposal was never mentioned him in connection with the Wa-

investigation, to the White House

tergate case. -But he revealed that it had been presented to him in an offhand way during the subsequent investigation of former Vice-President Spiro Agnew.

He said the idea was broached "by an overworked lawyer" after an argument. He declined to identify the lawyer. Asked if it was White House attorney Fred Bushardt, who played a key role in the Agnew negotiations, Mr. Petersen shook his head but then said he did not mean to indicate

WASHINGTON, May 3 (AP).-Former White House chief-of-staif H.R. Haldeman has demanded the right to inspect and test original recordings of every conversation he had with President Nixon.

Mr. Haldeman made his request in the form of a discovery motion filed today in U.S. District Court, where he and six other former White House and Nixon campaign advisers are ac-cused of attempting to cover up the Watergate scandal. Mr. Haldeman's request not limited to conversations about Watergate but would foclude all conversations with the

the Senate Watergate committee. He also said he agreed with Assistant U.S. Attorney Earl Silbert, who said recently that investigators considered Dean cooperative with their probe early in the investigation while Dean was involved in covering it x. Mr. Silbert testified that there was no reason to believe otherwise at the time.

Mr. Petersen insisted throughout the brief interview that he felt he could not talk about the transcripts at any length because he felt bound by U.S. District Judge John Siries's instructions that those involved should avoid

He said further that for him to discuss his personal views would give them the added weight of his office and he felt that would be improper.

IraqReopens Post On Turk Border

DIYARBAKIR, Turkey, May 2 (Reuters) .- Iraq today reopened its border post on the Turkish frontier for the first time since fighting between Iraqi government forces and Kurdish rebels broke out in March.

A 2,000-man armored force of government troops, supported by 2,500 Kurdish mercenaries, recaptured the post on Tuesday. after it had been in rebel hands for seven weeks.

The Voice of Kurdistan, the rebel radio monitored in eastern Turkey, reported that fighting was continuing elsewhere in northern Iraq. The radio accused the Iraqi Air Force of killing 63 Kurdish civilians in two raids and said the rebels had blown up a natural gas pipeline near

French Left Candidate Is Crowd-Pleaser

Barnstorming Mitterrand Is a Slick Political Performer

By Jonathan C. Randal

DIJON, France, May 2 'WP).__ A tired François Mitterrand communed here Tuesday night with nearly 7,000 admirers in another of the lay masses the candidate of the united left has conducted in the last two weeks to enhance his presidential ambitious.

The 51-year-old Socialist leader at times seemed to race through his set speech, telescoping words and losing listeners who drifted away from the vast cow barn of a meeting hall, which was not signed with accustics in mind. Yet, for the local falthful in this eastern French city, which has not elected a leftist candidate to national office since the late Gen. Charles de Gaulle took power in 1958, it was a moving performance. Arriving from Paris more than

His intricate use of handsnow cupped, now pointing, now leaning on the front of the podium-combined with a practiced debater's sense of timing and a well-timbred voice, left little doubt that Mr. Mitterrand's long years in the National Assembly have made him into one of France's most forceful public speakers. Not without a hint of dem-

which often is the mark of a crowd-pleaser, Mr. Mitterrand led his mainly working-class audience through his now favorite exercise of holding Finance Minister Valery Guscard d'Estaing, his main rival, responsible for the country's ills. Gaullist Candidate Jacques Choban-Delmas's name was rarely mentioned—perhaps normal in view of the former prime minister's rapidly eroding public-opin-ion-poli ratings. party's reputation. "Our prime minister," Mr. Mitterrand said, "now who is it?" as the crowd roared approval.

In pursuing his major campaign theme that the finance minister had reduced the other ministries to "colonies," Mr. Mitterrand did not quarrel with France's unquestioned record of economic growth.

Rather he criticized how the wealth had been shared and, in a series of often snide remarks, asked: "Who pays for growth?"

He listed the farmers, bedevilled by falling prices; small businessman forced into bankruntey in increasing numbers; repatriated settlers from North Africa, still awaiting indemnities promised more than a decade ago; immigrant workers living in "intolerable" conditions; the elderly, surviving on a pittance; holders of government savings accounts, receiving 6 percent interest when

But in perhaps an understandable effort to attract the vital fringe Centrist voters he needs to win, Mr. Mitterand went no further than pledging allegiance to otherwise unexplained "fundamental options" of the controversial joint election program signed in 1972 by the Socialists, Communists and a dissident Centrist group,

This reluctance to accept total identification with the Communist party-a sentiment the Communists have accepted with good grace, at least in public—led Mr. Mitterrand to justify his course as "collectivism," one of the many euphemisms for Communism employed in the French political vocabulary.

·Collectivism, he insisted, had been practised by early Christian communities and did not mean that he was going to confiscate everyone's private property if he

Middle-Class Fears Also in an effort to calm middle-class fears, Mr. Mitterrand argued that his victory would insure serene labor relations, "We are in a position to maintain social peace," he insisted "because we can discuss among ourselves and make each other understand the sacrifices we must make."

If the Gaullist-dominated coalition had been guilty of "confiscating" the nation's wealth for a tiny minority, Mr. Mitterrand argued, its other cardinal sins were "haughtiness, insolence and contempt" for the nation's republican institutions.

"They cut the country in two." he intoned to wild cheering, castigating his adversaries for suggesting that the left, once in power, would constitute an intol-erable "hell" for Frenchmen.

He concluded what he termed a "joyous fete" by paraphrasing Mao Tse-tung, "Power does not come out of a gun—bec use they Mr. Mitterrand's political opponents] have the guns but it may be in your hands."

'Growth Industry' of Its Day

2 E.S. Economists Challenge Traditional View of Slavery

By Soma S. Golden NEW YORK, May 2 (NYT) - playing the numbers game on a unusually heated scholarly debate over the institution and its effects species of econometrician-a comon black Americans.

With high-speed computers, mountains of data, textbook theories and lancy mathematics, the economists have invaded the '--ritory of historians, the transwas and was not. And the historians, a group with little internal cohesion, are uncertain just how to respond.

Although the dispute has been building for years, it burst into full force this week with publi-cation of "Time on the Cross," a wo-volume analysis of slave history by economists Robert Fogel and Stanley Engerman, both professors at Rochester University, both quasi historians and both skilled mathematicians. -

New Tenets

Prof. Fogel and Prof. Engerman have slashed their way through the history books of slavery, leaving almost nothing behind them intact. With a mixture of intellectual delight and academic challenge, they attacked one after another the traditional views of the Old South and came up with tenets of their own, among them the following:

• Slavery was not a dving. profitiess business, but the growth industry of its day. as

Pros. Fogel puts it. Slave agriculture was not backward and inefficient, but about 35 percent more efficient than "free" farming. • Slaves were not lazy, incompetent workers. They were tough team laborers, more efficient than-their white counterparts. · Slave familles were not generally torn apart by wicked white traders selling them "down the river." Instead, slaveholders had an economic incentive to keep the family unit together and to keep worker morale high, • Slave women were not used on stud farms to breed new slaves, nor were they typically forced to bed with slaveholders. Indeed, slave women generally abstained from sexual activity before marriage.

· Slaves were not worked to exhaustion. Instead, they were relatively well fed, housed and clothed because of their key part in the production process. -

Breaking Icons

On and on it goes for 453 pages; ringing with the sound of breaking icons. The book which is divided into a volume for lav readers and one for technicians, gathers for the first time the authors and other cliometricians, self-styled New Economic Historians, who have tried to wed Cito, the muse of history, to mathematics. It is a merger that has raised both cheer and havoc

There is enough in the first two volumes, however, to keep the experts at one another's throats for years. While a leading Southern historian, Yale University's Vann Woodward, pra d in slave studies, another major slave historian. Kenneth Stampp. of the University of California at Berkeley, criticized the book's use of statistical averages to describe a slave world of great diversity. Few black scholars seemed willing to speak about the book

However, Kenneth Clark, a black sociologist, tangled with Prof. Fogel in an emotional debate on the "Today" television show this week. Prof. Clark called the methodology "curious" and proceeded to blast the authors for painting slavery "as a benign form of oppression."

Still, he argues, it is time to try to set black history straight. Prof. Woodward of Yale seems to agree.

"The traditional historian." he said, "relies heavily on individual experiences-which are also true but could misrepresent the overfruits of 18 years of labor by the all picture. For a historian, deeply engaged in the slaves tendency to pick out examples horrible experiences of individual slaves and to emphasize them."

This technique, according to the cliometricians, has buried much of the truth of slavery beneath elary Committee over the proper reaction to Mr. Nixon's response to the committee's subpoena may constitute a tactical success for the President. But it also illustrates how a really serious study of White House in-Volvement in Watergate can be imperiled by concentrating on what is missing in the way of possible evidence instead of -initially. at least-on what is available, Rep. Wiley Mayne, R-Iowa, made a sensible suggestion: the transcripts contained "a tremendous amount of information we've never had before," and that should be "digested" before the committee took any action based on it.

This takes time, and Watergate has already consumed so much time, and diverted so much official energy, that it has become enormously expensive to the nation. But Anatole France, in his parody of the Dreyfus case, pointed out how damaging a vast accumulation of evidence, and irrelevancies disguised as evidence, and forgeries purporting to be evidence, can become when it is stored away. It can overflow the filing cabinets and smother the accumulators.

There has been a notion that the White House tapes would give simple answers to the question of the extent to which President Nixon was directly responsible for illegal acts by his agents, or for the ensuing efforts to cover them up. The transcripts do not provide that answer in any direct waybut neither do they rule out, absolutely, such a responsibility. Rather, they testify to a

The sharp division within the House Judi- climate in the White House in which Watergate and the cover-up became possible.

Perhaps somewhere in a missing tape or an "unintelligible" remark something more specific is still concealed. But a careful study of the available transcripts can still provide the basis for considered judgments, and exploration in detail of the gaps that exist. And that is a more reasonable manner of approaching the solemn issues in this tangled case than additional blanket subpoenas.

There is also the very knotty question of the committee's powers under the Constitution and its ability to enforce the powers it claims. To make the President's refusal to give full compliance to the committee subpoena an article in an impeachment is, of course, possible. But then the constitutional and political question arises as to whether Congress, which unquestionably has the right and the power to impeach, is acting wisely, and with a proper regard to precedent, in making its rules too sweeping. That was one of the reasons the impeachment of President Andrew Johnson has been condemned by history: It was largely based on Johnson's refusal to comply with bad congressional statutes, passed with the specific purpose of hemming him in. The House Judiciary Committee subpoens and the Tenure of Office Act (which led to Andrew Johnson's impeachment) are by no means the same, but Congress would be wise to avoid even the appearance of similarity by sifting what it has before it insists on more.

Path to Peace in Africa

Gen. Antonio de Spinola's plan for giving Portugal's African territories self-government inside a federation with the mother country could be a halfway house on the road to full independence for Angola, Mozambique and Guinea-Bissau. The similarity of the federation idea to Gen. Charles de Gaulle's French community concept of the 1950s is striking; the parallel could also be instructive.

In the plebiscite that created Gen. de Gaulle's Fifth French Republic in 1958, all of France's black African territories except Guinea-which opted for immediate independence-voted for autonomy within the French community, with France handling their defense and foreign relations. In little more than two years, however, every one of them had negotiated full independence with De Gaulle's blessing, while retaining close economic, fiscal and defense ties with Paris.

Obviously struck by the De Gaulle example in trying to figure out a way to extricate Portugal honorably from the costly morass of its African wars, Spinola also proposes that his federation of four "equal states" should leave Lisbon responsible for foreign affairs, defense and finance. He says "selfdetermination should not be confused with independence": he will not even contemplate Independence at present.

What both Gen. Spinola and leaders of the African liberation movement who now reject his federation would find is that in the existing African political climate, self-determination would lead inexorably to independence. The general will also discover that the sooner Portugal begins serious negotiations with these leaders the better will be its chances of preserving valuable links with the territories when they do become independent, even though they may not wish to be tied too tightly to Lisbon as some of the old French colonies still are

"We must continue in Africa, certainly," wrote Spinola in the book that helped provoke the overthrow of Portugal's authoritarian government and elevate him to power. "But not by force of arms nor by the subjection of Africans nor by the upholding of myths against which the world is fighting." On their side, for the leaders of the liberation movements to reject negotiations with such a man in the hope of achieving immediate total victory would be to waste lives and risk military intervention from South

Nixon and Watergate

The Nixon speech was a desperate move of a President who finds the water has reached his neck, for whom attack can be the only defense... It is obviously the most daring and riskiest attempt by Nixon in his entire career to keep himself above water ... Anyone who reads the extracts must doubt he can succeed.

-From the Stuttgarter Zeitung (Stuttgart).

It is not clear on what the optimism of the [Nixon] lawyers is based, definitely not on the released texts. The optimistic remark by Nixon's press chief that the release of the tapes means the end of Watergate is premature. At most, it means the beginning of the last episode.

-From the Algemeen Dagblad (Rotterdam). * * *

Once again Mr. Nixon has spoken to the nation and once again has falled to convince. The massive volume of transcripts of his tape-recorded conversations at the White House, delivered to the House Judiciary Committee, is but the latest, though far the most extensive, in a succession of attempts by the President to clear his name in the Watergate affair and bring the whole nightmare to an end. Each new revelation, dragged out into the light of day by his accusers. seems to put the President in deeper travail. It will take a little time, no doubt, for the transcripts to be sifted and studied, but it is already evident from the first reactions in Washington that the new material raises more questions than it answers about the President's role in the investigation into Watergate. The incompleteness of the transcripts, the gaps and elisions, will intensify congressional demands to hear the tapes themselves. And so the pressure for further disclosures will go on.

-From the Times (London).

Italy's Economy

The Italian decision to impose direct controls on imports is the latest indication of the strains which the massive oil price increases of last year are inflicting on the world's money system. For the moment, the Italians will almost certainly not be copied by any other major country... The measures probably will not have a dramatic effect on the volume of imports into Italy, but they will make it less certain that the world will weather the oil crisis without precipitating an international trade recession... Not only may the Italian measures be the first hint of an international epidemic of "beggar-myneighbor" trade policies, they may create yet another rift in the tattered Common

> -From the Guardian (London). * * *

It was inevitable that Italy would have to take steps to act directly to curb its big payments deficit. That said, however, the Italian move remains open to criticism for the way in which it was carried out. It is of course in conflict with the rules of GATT, and is an extremely dangerous precedent ... -From the Financial Times (London).

The word "negotiations" is between brackets deliberately be-cause the 35-nation Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe, now in its eighth month, has become a thicket of brackets the likes of which has never been seen before even in this capital of esoteric diplomacy. Practically every suggestion or amendment here is immediately divided into bracketed compartments. It has proved the only way to overcome Soviet stubss and give the impression of movement. According to even the revised schedule, this second stage of the conference should now be drawing toward the end of its work of drafting resolutions. The timetable was that Brezhnev,

Nixon and other heads of goverument would gather in Helsinki in July to sign the final documents heralding a new era

Mood Shifts

The Helsinki stage now looks unlikely before September. The reason is that amiable conversation ends once the coffee cups are drained in the Geneva delegates bar. The same friendly Russian or East European who has been telling his Western counterpart: "Be patient... give a little more... we will be forthcoming liner once seated at the conference table.

The aim of the Western nations, which include the United States and Canada, is to throw away those "brackets," because each pair of them represents a restriction or a qualification of a clear-cut accord. One bitter Western delegate commented: The Russians are fighting over every word that comes out from the brackets. I would guess by now that we have used up every single printer's mark in Geneva

The brackets represent points at issue and are put in after an unsuccessful attempt has been made to weld a Western text to an Eastern one. One American expert explained: "We get some work done this way for the brackets enable us to move on before coming back. The brackets are useful if there is something in a draft text that someone doesn't like at all. Put it in brackets,' someone always says.' paracters, the expert added parenthetically, are also used to take care of small, awkward alternatives, the "ands" and the

A certain amount of this goes on at any intricate international conference, but the security and cooperation conference has beaten all records by a long shot.

One of the points at issue the length of prior warning major military maneuversthe NATO countries want 60 days are moving around and are prepared to give a similar rantee; the European neutrals tay only 30 days is necestary while the Russians think five days' warning is sufficient.

Border Zones

This so-called "confidence building measure" is linked to what constitutes a major military maneuver-one division or more. say the West Germans; at least four, reply the Russians, meaning one could keep slient about shifts of anything under $0,000 or 70,000 troops. Then there's the question of whether the whole of Europe should be included or just the border zones. No one denies that these are basic matters of national interest, but it is still somewhat ridiculous that eight months of talk have led to one 114-word text in which only four words are not bracketed.

The most optimistic remark any Western delegate would make after the conference resumed last week was: "We are inching forward." The comment referred to a small breakthrough on increasing the distribution of Western newspapers in the Com-munist countries. More frequent comments made after another week of talk were "disappointing" and "discouraging." Some progress has been made on a text concarning meetings between mem-bers of divided families, but one West German described as "disgusting" the Soviet attitude over family reunification and the high cost of exit visas which Moscow wants to impose.

Britain, West Germany and Italy have been trying to put some teeth into proposals for the freer flow of people and informa-They want to facilitate cross-border marriages and travel in general, publish an East-West magazine and have more joint TV programs. The West has softened its stand on several of these matters. And on the last evening before the Easter recess the West agreed with the Russians on a text concerning "the in-violability of frontiers" which a ielighted Prayda called a step of exceptional significance."

Moscow's main aim in pushing this conference had been just that acceptance by the West of the postwar lines in Europe. The Western nations, particularly West Germany, want a reference "peaceful changes" boundaries written in later, thus keeping alive the possibility of German reunification.

With the stambling block of the frontier question removed. the West hoped that the conference would make further progress in the section devoted to "cooperation in hyperstates fields." Hopes rose a bit higher when the seven Warsaw Pact leaders stated after their mid-April summit that they were insted in cooperation as well

So far no new instructions have been given East bloc delegations in Geneva. "They don't want to be pinned down on details. They won't come clean," complained one delegate from an EEC country. This can be seen for exple when the British insist that people who apply to leave a country should not be discriminated against or lose their jobs, should their request be

There is continued Soviet insistence on "preambles," in-troductory statements full of "key" words like "nominterference, sovereignty, local laws and customs" which the Western delegates feel will empty what follows of any real meaning.

One delegate commented: "The trick is to find some kind of language which does not negate what has been agreed yet which gives the Russians the protection they seek." The British view is that the conference may be witnessing another display of traditional Soviet negotiating technique, leaving the crunch to the end in the hope of winning big concessions in a last-minute, quick

He is told that an assistant, Eril (Bud) Krogh, is unhappy at having perjured himself over the burglary of Daniel Elisberg's psychiatrist. His reaction is: "Bud should just say it was a que of national security." (Krogh at first did so, but then he repented and said he realized that he had been false to democracy and Iaw.)

The most depressing passage, or most frightening, may be one on March 21 in which the President, Haldeman and Dean work up among themselves a "national rationals to explain security" away the Elisberg burglary if Howard Hunt should talk. In his speech to the nation this week Nixon suggested that paying off Hunt might have been justified to keep him from disclosing "national security" matters. But the March 21 transcript makes clear that the only secret involved was the raid on Elisberg's psychiatrist. The March 21 tape is the heart of the matter. Richard Nixon has achievements to his credit, and individual kindnesses. But I doubt that any fair-minded person could read even the edited transcript of that one conversation, stripped of nasty words and personal characterizations, with-out feeling that there is an ugly strain in the man's character.

Persuasive And more: That tape is persuasive evidence that the President obstructed justice. Whatever Nixon knew before, he knew then that Jeb Magruder and Egil Krogh and probably others had committed crimes, and he did not tell his officials at the Justice Department and FRI-not until Dean and Magnider began talking themselves. Again, Nixon's words about Howard Hunt's immediate demand for money add up to a yes, and $75,000 was paid. The strange thing about this week in Watergate is that it began so well for Nixon. First there was the acquittal of John Mitchell and Maurice Stans.

Then there was the President's speech, very likely the most effective he has ever made. Listening to his explanation of what was about to be disclosed, one wondered why he had not disclosed disclosure, when it came, quickly began to erode belief. Rieven of the subnosped tanes were missing. The editing was not even a "Stennis compromise": No independent party vouched for the transcripts. No experts would be allowed to check tape gaps marked "mintelligible." The President's staff had spent months editing these transcripts, but the House Judiciary Committee leaders would not be permitted to have staff help in checking them against the tapes. In disputes with Nixon, he is entitled to counsel, but not the other side. Even more significant was the indication that, after this, the White House would give no more evidence to anyone. That would mean nothing on IIT, the dairy case, the Howard Hughes money and would mean letting a President limit the grounds of his own impeachment.

In manner as well as matter,

Media Blitz Then there was the media blitz. In imitation of "Alice in Wonderland," we had the defense's closing argument first, the evidence after: James St. Clair's tendentions account of the transcripts was given to the press iong before the transcripts themselves. Key Republicans were also approached before the fact, and television programs lined up. Television gives any President great advantages. Nixon, using that power to the full, obviously hoped to impress an image on the public mind that words could never undo, facts never overtake. But Watergate is not like that. again that it will not be diverted from the real issues. Nor can Congress avoid its duty to pass judgment. What matters is the facts the facts of what Richard Nixon has done.

Dean's Value As a Witness Still Viable

By Evans and Novak

WASHINGTON-The stunning acquittel by the Mitchell-Stans jury, while lifting flagging spirits at the embattled White House, falls far short of what the Nixon camp hopes it will accomplish: The destruction of John W. Dean 3d as star prosecution

In both congressional impeachment proceedings and the Watergate cover-up trials, Dean has assets he lacked in the New York trial of ex-cabinet members John Mitchell and Mourice Stans. Whereas Dean's association with the Vesco case was tangential and his testimony uncorroborated. his involvement in the Watergate conspiracy is intimate and his accusations at least partially supported by tape recordings and other witnesses. What's more, the message from the Manhattan trial to special presentor Leon Jaworski is clear: Dean must be presented to future juries with far more care.

In short, White House reports Dean's death as a reliable witness are greatly exaggerated. Indeed, the fact that John Dean lives promises intensified assaults on him based on the Mitchell-Stans acquittal. Vice-President Ford's immediate assertion that the verdict "severely eroded" Dean's credibility sets the tone for the rising assault.

Not Conclusive

The M. chell-Stans case was never viewed in legal circles here as a conclusive test of Dean's credibility. The U.S. attorney's office in New York brought the Mitchell-Stans indictment a year ago despite pleas for caution from Washington counterparts, then conducting the Watergate investigation Elliot Richardson as attorney general was always leery about the case.

Lacking documentary evidence, the prosecution relied on wit--Bradford Cook, custed chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission, and discredited New Jersey politician Harry Sears-who proved to be ters on the stand, Dean, playing only a minor role in the Vesco affair, could not compensate for inadequate key government witnesses

Nevertheless, the Mitchell-Stans defense lawyers did undercut Dean's credibility with the jury. By describing him as a confes felon who was now talking solely to buy a lighter sentence, the Mitchell-Stans lawyers established the model defense for accused Watergate conspirators.

Dean's friends believe the New York prosecution inadequately prepared the jury for his testimony and hope Jaworski will take note. Such preparation would present Dean as a man who could have weathered the storm had he denied everything and joined fellow Nixon lieutenants in noncooperation but instead invited a spiracy. Dean's decision to go secretly to the U.S. prosecutor came two weeks before he first marked him as the Watergate scapegost But such a gilding of Dean must be restricted to the courtroom, thanks to gag rules imposed by federal Judges John Sirica and Gerhard Gesell. On Feb. 15. Gesell tongue-lashed Jaworski for his televised defense of Dean's credibility and ordered him off TV talk shows. Thus, while government officials from the President and Vice-President on down can assault Dean, the prosecutors cannot defend him.

Intensify Attack

Long before juries are empaneled in Watergate cover-up cases, however. Dean's credibility will be tested in the House impeachment proceedings. Consequently, the attack by the White House prop-agands machine on Dean's credibility will intensify, based on the Mitchell-Stans verdict.

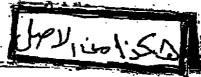

A rare public defense, not only of Dean's credibility but his role in history, was made last week in the University of Oklahoma Law Day lecture by Robert C. McCandles, formerly Dean's cocounsel. "Had he not come forward, leaving aside motives. America's democratic processes and our precious civil liberties would today be in grave peril without his decision to testify, and without the prosecutors' being able to use that testimony as a grappling hook to break the wall of the cover-up and con-

McCandles is no objective source, but he correctly defined Dean's crucial role in breaking the scandal. As such, Dean remains the major threat to the President in a form scarcely diminished by the "not guilty verdict in New York.

ed that young kids can put great pictures on the Boulevard des Italiens, right on the sidewalk, right under foot-it's a lot more sensible than trying to put a picture on the ceiling at the Opera, where in any case Chagall has already been, and not for any 80 cents, either: honor, wealth, membership, critical appreciation, fringe benefits, and a long leisurely lunch on one of the Bateaux-Mouches.

Thus, we see that there are people who appreciate art as they are instructed to, or as they choose.

And that there are the other people who go about their business, sometimes on bicycles with small motors fitted into them, weaving in and out of heavy traffic like well-schooled ballet dancers in a riot scene.

These people can take the Mona Lisa or leave it. They do not feel the need to be more cultured than they are, or than the neighbors are, and they do not want to buy a Picasso as an investment, even if it is a forgery, just so it has an interesting story, such as the story about how Picasso actually made the painting in imitation Matisse, who didn't know how to draw a horse, so the horse is a little strange, having only two legs, and so on and so forth.

Couple of Weeks

These people may want to know about 4 bis Rue de Chateaudun, where for the next couple of weeks they may see about three dozen small paintings signed B.M. de Route, a slim man of 50 or so, said to be a Montenegran, said to be a prince. The paintings must be seen to Sabena announces a relaxing new way to reach the Far East: the Douglas DC-10.

Horses for courses.

Next time you fly Sabena to the Far East or to Africa, it's possible you'll find yourself aboard a Douglas DC-10-30 CF. The DC-10 is one of the new generation of wide-bodied superjets which Sabena is bringing into service in 1974. Objective: to make your journey easier and more comfortable. Each of these new jets has been selected with a particular type of operation in mind.

flights. Another type of aircraft has been chosen for short haul operations. And yet another for the transatlantic route.

The wide bodied principle.

Sabena's new DC-10's were built by McDonnell Douglas on the new wide-bodied principle. The cabin is almost 19 feet wide - with 8 feet of headroom. You can really spread out in your seat. And you'll never bang your head - unless you're a Harlem Globetrotter. Even the passenger windows give you a 30% bigger view than on ordinary planes. While your hand baggage slips neatly out of the way into a personal overhead locker.

Smooth, silent power from

The Sabena DC-10's have a new kind of engine known as a "high by-pass turbofan," built by General Electric. Apart from being much more powerful. these engines - along with superior new sound proofing mean that you can converse quietly anywhere in the cabin.

Easy come easy go. In Sabena's new DC-10's the fuselage is divided into separate rooms: with special wardrobes for coats and new. superbly comfortable seats designed to stay comfortable for hours on end. Each room has its own lavatories. There are even electric razor points in the cabin - so a toilet is never engaged while somebody shaves. And each room has two passenger aisles. So you're never farther than one seat from an aisle and Sabena's cabin service is even quicker.

New fresh air system.

Every passenger seat is assured of a supply of clean.fresh air by a revolutionary new air conditioning system which changes the air in the cabin completely every three minutes.

The good neighbour.

The DC-10's turbofan engines are designed for more efficient combustion, reducing pollution through soot or unburned fuel to a minimum. So even if you don't fly, you'll appreciate the DC-10.

Polar route via Anchorage to Tokyo flyingtime 16 hrs 35 ntins. Southen route, via Athens, Bombay and Bangkok to Tokyo: flyingtime 18 hrs 40 mins.

> Now, there's a better way to fly... From April the DC-10 serves Sabena's Far East route - with a choice of flying over the top of the world (Brussels - Anchorage, Alaska - Tokyo) or taking the South route to the East (Brussels - Athens -Bombay - Bangkok - Tokyo). On the 1st July, the DC-10 comes into service on Sabena's Africa route to Kinshasa and Johannesburg. The DC-10 is another step forward in Sabena's endless quest to make your journey shorter, easier and more comfortable. In short, it's a better way to fly...

Go Belgian. Go Sabena.

EEC Said to Weigh Aid to Italy

PARIS, May 2.—Dismayed by Italy's shock decision to set ported today to be considering an exempt. offer of financial aid to Italy in return for the withdrawal of the import restriction plan.

The plan, announced yesterday, is due to go into effect May 7. Rome is to publish details of the scheme tomorrow.

Reliable sources in Bonn reported the possibility of offering financial aid to Italy. They noted, however, that important problems must be cleared up before the offer can be made.

The purpose of the credit would be to avoid the unpleasant trade and political consequences of the import control program, under which Italian importers bolster Italy's deteriorating pay-ments balance, has caused considerable anxiety among Italy's trading partners and is seen generally as the Forst blow to EEC unity since France dropped out of the EEC currency bloc on Jan. 19.

Considerable Anxiety

It is assumed in Bonn that the main burden of the aid would fall on Germany. However, Bonn. has solid trade reasons for want-ing Italy to withdraw its import world's third-largest importer of

Only Alternative to Curbs Is Said to Be Bankruptcy

The idea is to swiftly cut back imports of nonessential products—raw materials and capital goods are exempt—and reduce the mass of domestic spending money available. It is estimated that 40 percent of Italy's imports will be affected. Why did Italy take the decision? The answer, as with the

• Unlike other European countries, Italy is enjoying something of an industrial boom. The effect of this is again to create a huge demand for imported raw materials.

W. Germany Urges a Study Of Oil Companies' Profits

West Germany called today for a prices of crude oil by the projoint international probe of major oil companies' price policies and profits.

Bonn considers the price issue to be as important as preparations for the conference. Mr. Rohwedder said his country is increasingly concerned by the higher prices of oil products on the domestic market.

In 1973, he said, the major multi-national oil companies obtained sharply higher profits despite the crisis that began in the final quarter of the year.

BP Operates At a Loss in Some Areas

LONDON, May 2 (AP-DJ).-British Petroleum Co. reported today that "there are some areas where we believe we were actually trading at a net loss last month, including most of the main continental countries."

The report was given by chair-man Sir Eric Drake at the company's annual general meeting. Sir Eric said, "We are maintaining most of our trade, even it some losses are involved, and I accept our responsibility to attempt this. But this situation must clearly be remedied by higher prices before long."

Sir Eric said that "currently we estimate that our Middle East cost per barrel of crude oil averages nearly $9.50 per harrel as against the oft-quoted figure of $7 a barrel.

"What we are faced with is an extraordinary situation selling oil the cost of which we don't exactly know and on such a small margin that it only needs a swing of a penny or so to have an enormous impact on our results."

He said that fortunately last winter was extraordinarily mild. But the effect of this, coupled with the industry's reaction to the quadrupling of the cost of oil and the fear of incipient recession, has meant high inventories and a weaking of prices in Europe in the past month.

Consequently, he said, BP's associated companies are not now fully recovering the increased costs it must expect to have to pay during this time so that there are some areas where it believes it was actually trading at a net loss last month, including most of the main continental

In Rome, the Treasury Ministry said in an informal note circulated today that the import curbs were established in answer to EEC pressure on Italy to im-prove its balance of payments.

A month ago, the note said, the EEC monetary committee "invited" Italy to improve its balance of payments, arrest the export of capital, reduce domestic demand and limit the expansion of the monetary base.

The curbs are "aimed at meeting all these problems," the note The tone of the note seemed to indicate a certain amount of unhappiness among Italian officials about the generally negative reaction abroad to the import curbs.

It was also disclosed today that Italy has exhausted its $1.8 billion short-term credit facility arrang-

A spokesman for Bank of Italy governor Guido Carli said the credit had been withdrawn within the past few weeks.

The spokesman said that other credits remain in effect, so far virtually untouched.

In March, these credits amount-ed to a $3-billion credit line with the United States, $500 million each with France and West Germany, $250 million with Switzerland and convertible paper valued at $1.5 billion, for a total of

These "compensatory" loans have totaled well over $5 billion in the past 15 months, according to central bank figures.

Most Pay More Than 20% Of Their Salary for Food

NEW YORK, May 2 (AP).-Only three major industrialized nations—the United States, Australia and Denmark—can boast that food costs their citizens less than 20 percent of after-tax

By contrast, some countries report percentages above 30 percent. Sweden and Finland are in that category, and Italy is not far below it. But that does not mean that individual bargains are similarly distributed. Based on U.S. Agriculture Department figures compiled last September, a sirioin steak cost $4.04 in Demmark but only 69 cents in Argentina. In the United States the price was $2.29. In Britain, where one-quarter of take-home pay goes for food, a pound of butter sold for only 51 cents, compared with

95 cents in the United States. If you lived in Japan, where the cost of food absorbs between one-quarter and one-third of after-tax income, you would have paid $12.83 a pound for a sirloin steak. Americans might benefit from relative bargains at the food counters, but of equal importance is the fact that their incomes are higher than in any of the other industrial nations. That, of course, serves to lower the percentage needed for food.

Export Credit Parley Set

BRUSSELS, May 2 (AP-DJ) .--Officials of the U.S. Treasury and Export-Import Bank will meet with Common Market commission officials in Brussels Monday preliminary discussions on EEC-proposed gentlemen's agreement on harmonizing export credit conditions to avoid competitive outbidding, sources reported today.

The U.S. group will include Jack Bennet, a Treasury under secretary, and Alex McCullough, a director of the Export-Import

The EEC proposes to bring export credit interest rates in line with general trends of credit granted by major exporting countries. It is seeking agreement on minimum interest rates and on maximum durations of credits for commercial export credits. Informants said that should the talks with the United States indicate that agreement is possible Japan and other industrialized countries may be invited to join in the talks.

EEC officials are understood to be in the process of putting the final touches to their proposal this week. Small details still need to be ironed out, sources added. But broadly, the EEC suggests that official financing of cemmercial export credits should not be made available at a rate below ? percent. The duration of credits should be limited to 18 or 12 years for developing countries, 8 1/2 years for state trading (Communist) countries and five years for industrial

Japanese TV Deliveries Fall

Japanese domestic deliveries of color television sets in March fell 44 percent from February and were 66 percent below the year-ago level at 147,000 units, the Electronic Machinery Associa-tion reports. The fall was due to price rises in January and a growing feeling among consumers of the need to economize, the association says. However, March color TV exports rose 62 percent from a year ago to 266,000 units as a result of a massive export drive as manufacturers sought to make up for declining domestic demand, the association says. Inventories rose to 939,000 sets, 32 percent higher than in March

Canada Seeking Trade Accord With EEC

By Douglas Ramsey

BRUSSELS, May 2 (WP) .- Canada has formally petitioned the European Economic Community for a comprehensive trade agreement to establish closer economic and political cooperation, official

European sources here have dis-European officials were surprised by Canada's decision to seek a trade agreement. The alternative, favored privately by several Europeans, would have been a mutual "declaration of principles" similar to the one proposed by U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger to guide relations between Europe and the United States.

An aide-memoire was sent last week by Ottawa to the nine Common Market member countries as

U.S. Treasury to Issue Bond With Record-High Coupon

By James L. Rowe Jr.

WASHINGTON, May 2 (WP). -The Treasury Department said vesterday that it will issue a little more than $4 billion in secu-rities to partially refinance $5.6 billion in issues maturing May 15. One of the issues, a 25-year bond, will bear an 8.5 percent coupon, the highest coupon rate the Treasury has paid in more than 100 years, according to

Under Secretary for Monetary

Affairs Paul Volcker. Mr. Volcker said most of the regular quarterly refinancing is aimed at wholesale money market dealers, rather than individuals, although bonds can be purchased in denominations as small as $1,000. The Treasury will auction $300 million of the bonds. In addition to the 8.5 percent bond, the Treasury will auction $2 billion of 25 1/2-month notes and $1.75 billion of four-year.

three-month notes. The shorter note will be issued May 15 and mature June 30, 1976, while the longer one will be issued May 15 and mature Aug. 15, 1999, although it may be called at any time after May 15,

The auction of the four-year. three-month note will be held May 7 and the auction of the 25 1/2-month note will be held

Mr. Volcker told newsmen that the government is in a relatively comfortable cash position and will therefore pay off about $1.5 billion of the maturing securities by not issuing new securities to replace, or refinance, them. All told, $5.6 billion in Treasury securities are falling due.

He said the government probably will have to do some financing in early June, just before the tax payment date of June 15.

Japan Exports Up 59 Percent During April

TOKYO, May 2 (AP-DJ) .-Japan's exports sharply increased last month, to $4.344 billion on a licensed basis, up 59 percent from a year earlier. the Ministry of International Trade and Industry said to-

Compared with March 1974, however, the ministry said, the April figure represented a drop of $300 million, or 6.2 percent. It said exports of steel materials rose 81 percent over April 1973, ships 85 percent and automobiles 43 percent. Meanwhile, the Bank of Japan announced that the United States was the top customer for Japanese products, with exports worth $993 million, up 12 percent.

Steel Prices Raised in U.S. As Government Lifts Controls

PITTSBURGH, Pa., May 2 (AP) .- U.S. Steel Corp., the nation's largest steel producer, joined others in the industry today and announced price increases that were less than predicted before government price controls were lifted.

U.S. Steel said it would raise prices on its full product line by an average of 5.7 percent, effective tomorrow. It gave no further breakdown of the in-

Industry observers had predicted increases of between 13 and percent following elimination of price controls.

A broad range of steel products, from airplanes and automobiles to bolts, boats and bobbie pins, will be affected by the increases, announced one day after the Cost of Living Council's wage and price controls expired.

Ninth-ranked Wheeling-Pittsburgh Steel Corp. also announced increases effective tomorrow and said they would include a raise of approximately 9 1.2 percent in the base price of tin mill products used in making cans. Wheeling-Pittsburgh also announced it was raising the base price of all steel products an average of 6 percent. The Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co. said it was boosting its prices by 10 to 25 percent for tubular and other products, while Revere Copper & Brass followed other companies in boosting copper and brass mill prices.

The cost of most airplanes manufactured by Beech Aircraft also was hiked today. The first round of price hikes in the metals industry came yesterday, led by third-ranked National Steel Corp., which boosted its tin mill costs, and by smaller producers announcing higher prices for various products. Director John Dunlop of the Cost of Living Council said two weeks ago that the steel industry had been forced to absorb $660 million in costs in the last eight

He added that if the industry attempted to recover its cost increases it would amount to a 22 percent increase.

U.S. Steel said its increases cover only additional costs incurred since Jan. 31, including provisions of a new labor agreement with steelworkers which went into effect yesterday. "The increases are in line with allowable under the previous Cost of Living Council rules," the company edded. During Phase-4 of the control program, the steel industry was allowed price hikes of 9.2 per-

Secret Letter

The letter has remained top but reportedly stresses Canada's desire to develop its economic and political ties with Europe as an alternative to dependence o the United States.

The Canadian request comes after months of high-level talks with European authorities on the feasibility of a declaration of principles between the EEC and

The EEC proposed, in a letter sent to Canadian authorities last November, that Ottawa decide whether such a political charter would be in order. In his formal reply, Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau reportedly placed emphasis on the need to cast a concrete foundation of economic cooperation rather than venture into vague statements of good

Despite giving top priority to a "concrete" trade pact, one European official says, the aidememoire does not preclude much closer political cooperation. For instance, Ottawa suggests that regular cabinet-level meetings be held to iron out political differences,

But the same official points out that Canada is not asking for prior consultations on major policy issues. This is in contrast to Mr. Kissinger's recent insistence that Europe regularly consult with the United States on major policies in which Washington's interests may be at stake. Would Be Unprecedented

The Canadian request also surprised European officials because a trade agreement with Canada would be unprecedented. Despite a network of aid, trade and technical pacts with over 60 countries, the Common Market has no comprenhensive trade agreement with any major industrialized country. Negotiations with Japan in 1972 came to a standstill because of Tokyo's belief that Europe wanted too much freedom to cut imports from Japan. In trade terms, Canada is the second-largest exporter to the Common Market after the United States, and Europe is the secondlargest supplier to Canada, also after the Unit d States. In 1973 Canadian exports to the nine EEC countries totaled about $6 billion. Since Britain joined the Com-mon Market in 1973, Canada has shown great interest in improving its relations with the EEC. Canada is a major exporter of is threatened by the much higher import taxes imposed by the Common Market, Canadian exports had had virtually duty-free access to Britain

ters .- The Securities and Exchange Commission today charg. ed top officers, directors and accountants of Penn Central Co. and subsidiaries with fraud in connection with the 1970 collapse of the railroad.

In a related matter, Goldman Suchs & Co. agreed to a consent order resulting from charges that it made talse and misleading statements of material facts and omitted to state material facts in connection with the sale of the commercial paper of the Penn Central Transportation Co. between 1968 and May 1970.

Goldman Sachs agreed to the consent order without admitting or denying the allegation in the complaint.

In the Penn Central case, the commission charged that the company made deliberately false and misleading statements concerning its financial condition in 1968 and 1969.

Specifically named in the complaint are the Penn Central Co., its subsidiaries Penn Central Transportation Co., Pennsylvania Co., and Great Southwest Corp.

Also named are Stuart Saunders, former chairman of the board: David Bevan, former chief financial officer; Peat Marwick, Mitchell & Co., the accounting firm and several outside directors -Edward Hanley, Franklin Lunding, and Stewart Rauch.

Dumped His Stock

Mr. Bevan is also charged with profiting on inside trading in 1969 when he allegedly sold 15.-000 shares of Penn Central stock without revealing the true financial condition of the company.

Mr. Bevan and others are also being asked to account for and return to the company some $4 million in corporate funds which were allegedly diverted to bank accounts in Liechtenstein. The SEC charged that Penn Central, Mr. Saunders, Mr. Bevan and Peat Marwick engaged in a scheme to "improperly increase the reported earnings of Penn Central and Penn Central Transportation as reflected in the financial statements for the year ending Dec. 31, 1969" and in the case of Transportation Co., for the year ending Dec. 31, 1968.

Faise Reports

The SEC said that the reports of Peat Marwick relating to financial statements of Transportation Co. and Penn Central were materially false and mis-

It charged that the statements were not presented in conformity with generally accepted accounting principles and the financial positions of the companies were not fairly presented by those statements.

The SEC said that Mr. Bevan sold the 15,000 shares on six separate occasions between Jan. 6, 1969 and June 25, 1969 without disclosing "material adverse nonpublic information."

The agency also said that in Acquisitions in 1973 include Aberdare Holdings Ltd., Opperman Holdings Ltd., Washington Engineering Ltd., the power equipment division of Bowthorpe Holdings Ltd., the aluminium forging business of Alcan Booth Industries Ltd.. William Aitkenhead Ltd., and, by Hawker Siddeley Canada. the 40% shareholding in Orenda Ltd. not previously owned.

The 1973 Annual Report will be posted to shareholders on 24th May, 1974 and will include the following comments in the Directors' Report:-

1973 was a year of strongly upward demand on all parts of the Group, both in the home and export markets, but also a year in which the full exploitation of this situation was hindered particularly in the U.K. by difficulties in obtaining supplies of materials and parts, by rapid changes in raw material prices, and by labour scarcity. All these things put up costs and placed burdens on management. Price control mechanisms in the U.K. left gaps between the rise of cost of raw materials and recovery from the market, and this had a considerable impact in those areas subject to the very rapid increases that were encountered in the costs of some materials.

The result achieved, despite these problems in the U.K.. was assisted by the strong export capability of the Group and the substantial element of overseas earnings. It speaks much for the ability, flexibility and professional competence of our managements.

Direct exports from the U.K. element of the Group were valued at £142m (1972; £103m), being about 41% of the U.K. output, and a substantial additional proportion eventually went abroad when incorporated in customers' products.

During 1973 the Group committed itself to the launching of a new civil aircraft, the HS 146. Under this arrangement Hawker Siddeley Group will find the finance necessary, less an amount of £46m at 1973 prices, which H.M. Government have taken as an investment in the project, and which is half the estimated launching costs.

The economic climate in Australia and Canada was better in 1973 and this is reflected in the results achieved by our companies in these areas. Hawker Siddeley Canada has this year made a more reasonable contribution to our earnings in relation to our investment. This flows from the major reconstruction which proved necessary in 1968 and the subsequent reorganisation and modernisation of the plants; this company has now the capability and opportunity to go 1974 will carry the burden of the disturbance in the U.K. sector due to restricted working ("three-day week") at the beginning of the year and there must be doubts about the course industrial relations will take in the U.K. based engineering industry. There will probably again be problems of rapid commodity price changes and of lack of continuity in supplies. The Group got through the three-day work period quite well though costs inevnably rose in the process. The effects of that disturbance are likely to be felt for some. months. We will have to face the heavy additional costs imposed on U.K. based industry in the March budget by way of increased corporation (a) and increased contributions to national insurance as well as the costly effects on cash flow that other provisions of the budget are designed to produce.

However, order books are tirm and managements have demonstrated their ability to act effectively to minimise the frustrations which bedevil industrial activity in the U.K. Our overseas earnings position seems likely to remain sound. It will, therefore, be a year in which only the optimistic could expect net profitability to show much improvement but there is no reason visible at the moment for any acute pessimism about the likely result.

LIMITED

A UK based public company with associates and subsidiaries in most countries in the world.

"Profit targets achieved 42% of our pre-tax profit earned outside UK"

Salient points taken from the Preliminary Figures and from the Statement by the Chairman, the Rt. Hon. Viscount Watkinson, CH

> £000 Sales and Royalties Income before taxes

- 1. All sections contributed to profits with the largest gains made, as planned, outside the UK.
- 2. Despite changed international economic circumstances, substantial capital investment is going ahead.
- 3. Earnings outside the UK must be further expanded.
- 4. The Company is well placed to face the new world economic conditions of shortages and increasing costs and takes a reasonably optimistic view of the future.

Copies of the Chairman's Statement and Preliminary Figures are available on application to The Secretary, Cadbury Schweppes Limited, 1/10 Contaught Place, London, W. 22EX, England.

More Time Off

BERLIN, May 2 (Reuters) .-East Germany announced yesterday that there will be more holldays, higher wages and cheaper ciotnes. Beginning next Jan. 1, the number of holidays will be raised from 15 to 18 for about 1.5 million workers, the Communist party newspaper, Neues Deutschland, reported. Also, it said, about helf a million workers will get wige increases.

It also appounced that beginning in July, the prices of Worlen's clothes made of synthetic materials will be reduced between 10 and 30 percent.

Growth Emphasis on Energy Production and Supply

1973 report points the way ahead

VEBA is among the biggest of western Germany's industrial corporations. Its activities cover electricity generating and supply, oil refining, the petro-chemical industry, plastics and container glass production, transport by land and water, and other services. Its substantial stockholdings include petroleum distribution and sales, the chemical industry, fertilizers and inorganic products as well as refining capacity and overland pipelines.

However, VEBA's main strengths are the generation and distribution of electrical power, and the mineral oil industries. VEBA has more stockholders than any other single European company — 1.2 million, while the overall Concern employs a workforce in excess of 58,000.

Total sales of the Group during 1973 increased by 19% to more than 12 billion DM. The growth rate in the generation of electricity again exceeded the German average, generation of electricity again exceeded the German average, by 11.9% to more than 41 million KWh, although the increase in electricity supplied was slightly lower at 8.5%.

During 1972 VEBA put two nuclear power stations into operation and, by 1980, the company will have a total nuclear power output of close to 6.000 MW, some of it in partnership with other utilities. In view of the present energy situation it is interesting to note that 11% of the power generated by VEBA now comes from its nuclear power generated by VEBA now comes from its nuclear capacity.

The input of crude oil at VEBA's refineries throughout western Germany increased during 1973 by 10% to almost 11 million tonnes, although supply difficulties were encountered towards the end of the year. Gasoline, aviation fuels and motor oils are marketed through the ARAL network of 9.200 gas stations, in which VEBA has a 25% interest. Heating oil is sold and distributed through the Hugo Stinnes AG, a subsidiary of the Group.

Earnings Situation
Although VEBA was still faced with heavy cost increases, above all labor expenses and raw material purchases, the earnings situation in almost ail divisions improved during 1973.

The increase in electricity supplied and the growing use of nuclear power produced improved earnings, while a strong improvement in the mineral oil processing sector was only dampened by the tremendous price increases and supply difficulties of the last three months of 1973.

VEBA's group earnings before taxation rose to more than 900 million DM, and the profit is in the region of 245 million DM. This provides earnings per share in the region of 15.—DM, compared with 12.—DM in 1972.

including expenditure on power generating plant and electricity distribution installations, around 76% of the volume of investment by VEBA went into the electricity sector. At the end of 1973 generating plant with a net capacity of about 8,700 MW was being built, 1,060 MW being accounted for by atomic power stations.

The figure covering the mineral oil and chemical the state of the sector of the sector of the sector of the sector of the mineral oil and chemical the sector of the sectors was largely taken up by an additional olefines plant, three big crude oil tankers and refinery expansion.

Investment expenditure in the glass sector, and on the transportation, trading and services divisions, covered mainly rationalization and replacements.

Developments during the current year have to be considered with caution. Cost pressures in all areas have increased again and these can only be partially covered by productivity increases and rationalization, so that price increases are unavoidable. Despite this situation, another satisfactory business year is expected for 1974.

In 1973, for the first time BICC's exports of goods and services from the U.K. exceeded £100M. That is 28.8% more than in 1972 and results from our determined policy of continuing to make increasing contributions towards resolving U.K.

balance of payments deficits. Profit attributable to Ordinary Shareholders was 14.7%, upon 1972 at £16.014M, of which almost 60%, was contributed by our Overseas Group—which again emphasizes the value of our wide geographical spread of operations. 1973 has again been a progressive and successful year for the BICC Group. This success has been achieved despite the unprecedented rise in the price of copper and other commodities with the consequential increase in our Bank overdraft at a time of very high interest rates and despite the delay in obtaining approval for appropriate price territories. Total sales rose by £167M to £628M, and even after full allowance for inflation, the large copper price increases, and exchange adjustments of $27M, were still substantially up on 1972. Operating profit was 32.7% up and, after higher financial charges, pre-tax profit was increases in the U.K. and some overseas

We have maintained the rise in earnings per share – from 7.80p in 1969 to 9.30p in 1970, 11.59p in 1971, 12.42p in 1972 and now to 14.23p in 1973. In Australia the M.M. Group of Companies had a record year as did Phillips Cables Limited in Canada. Excellent results were produced by our CEL-CAT Group of Companies in Portugal and by Scottish Cables (S.A.) Limited. In all these companies major additions to plant are in progress. Expansion is also planned by our Spanish company in Malaysia, New Zealand, Pakistan and Rhodesia.

The performance of our Associated Company. General Cable Corporation of U.S.A. improved considerably and we look forward to continued improvement in 1974.

Our U.K. Cables Group had a satisfactor, year with high levels of sales to home and export markets and our growing strength in the industrial sector provides increasing stability.

The U.K. Metals Group had a much better year than in 1972 with improved results in all activities except in our 19% investment in Anglesey Aluminium where a loss was sustained. but where the general standard of operating performance is now showing some improvement. Our Construction-Ballour Beatty Group of companies provided improved carnings over a wide area of its activities, but suffered some losses on a number of civil engineering contracts. The BICC Group started 1974 with excellent order books in our domestic market, prour esport markets, and in our overseas companies; and apart from some possible shortage of materials we were well set to continue in our growth patterns. Prospects for overseas companies and memport markets continue to be good, but a as impossible, against the present background of uncertaint, in the U.K., yet to assess how we will fare in the domestic market. equipped with people and plant to face problems and difficulties. From the Statement by the Chairman, Mr. W. F. a. . 5

FISHING WIDOWS

By Nick Lyons. Crown. 154 pp. $5.35.

Reviewed by Christopher Lehmann-Haupt

your average fishing memoir is an invitation to yawn. But this time of year that could scarcely matter less. The reviewer is mad to be off and thrashing water with bemboo. Short of the real thing, any humble text will serve, if only to provide monotony to dream by. Astonishingly, Nick Lyons's "Fishing Widows" more than serves. At its best, it even knocked me out of my fantasies and into the author's own memories. And I found myself humming with impatience as he pretended to enjoy a leisurely vacation dinner with his wife. I gasped with relief when he finally escaped to streamside and beheld an enormous evening insect hatch. My arm ached with pleasure when the first trout struck. I sniffled when a big one got away.

Naturally, Mr. Lyons commits some of the lesser sins of the fishing memoir, which is why I especially enjoyed Fishing Widows." He absolutely oozes trout-snobbery. Trout-snobbery is when you accept an invitation to appraise the fishing equipment of a recently deceased angler, and bristle with outrage to discover that his Wes Jordan Orvis has been used by a guy who drives a motorcycle and likes to sit on the piers at Sheepshead Bay and drink a few beers on a hot summer evening. Trout-snobbery is when you condescend to venture among the proles on Riverside Drive and learn what little there is to know about "The Fine Art of Hudson River Fence Fishing." ("Fortunately I doubt if I can ever master this art.") But I'm a trout-snob too and so embrace Mr. Lyons.

He flashes a knuckle or two of male chauvinist pigginess. "Fishing is complexly irrelevant," he writes in his prologue, "and its very capacity to absorb men completely makes it the more valuable to them-and the less intelligible to women. A woman may not like the idea of a mistress, but another woman is something she can understand and fight. Fishing-unintelligible and irrelevant to the uninitiate is, as the wise judge Robert Traver wisely notes, worse than adultery."

But, I ask you, how would you feel if you had actually been knocked unconscious by a fellow as happens to the hero of the semifictional "Fishing Widows: A Tale." Just suppose you loved to fish so much that you depended SUFFERING from fallen arch- on it to "unkill parts of myself ness and clubfooted humor, that otherwise might die," and your wife couldn't even bear the fishing art on the lampshade next to the bed in the motel where she's suiking while you're out on the stream? Because that's the way it is in the pages of Mr. Lyons's book; that's the way it is in real life, and that's the way it's going to go on being until men are liberated from fishing or women are liberated from sulking ... or both.

Also, Mr. Lyons goes mushy with sentiment here and there, and is afflicted with sentences like "What more than the hope" that you share brightly colored memories, too, my son?" But "On the Divide," in which the author helps his son to boat a huge brook trout, is a touching portrait of a neophyte getting the fever, and left me excited over an im-probable and dramatic catch. On yes, Mr. Lyons stretches the truth occasionally. But so do I, so do we all. Forgive him.

But what is it that is so bewitching about balancing yourself precariously in rushing water up to your sternum and waving a wooden stick to and fro in the air? Why do we climb out of warm beds in the middle of cold nights to watch the sunrise glinting off the water until crow's feet creep around our eyes? Has Mr. Lyons plumbed these mysteries for the edification of those who sulk and refuse to understand? Not quite. He writes: "Twentyfive years ago that sage, Mr. Edward Zern, claimed that 'roughly two-thirds of all fishermen never eat fish. This should surprise nobody. Fish is brain food. People who eat fish have large, well-developed brains. Prople with large, well-developed brains don't fish." But that is the clubfooted joker putting in his grostsworth, say I.

It doesn't matter. Let the sulkers sulk. As the diary found in that dead angler's fishing vest puts it: "Rena would never un-derstand. Never did. Not Clarise. Not Julie. Not even the shrill crisp of the morning or the quick disappearance of a dry fiv Not the swallows sweeping down the stream's alley, the stream birds beginning to work when a good hatch gets under way. Not the deep satisfaction of laying down a good cast, several in a row, 60 or 70 feet of line poised in the air and then reaching toward the eddy behind the midstream rock. Not the squirrel who my snack a half hour ago. Not the colors of the water or the sharp, sudden tug of a fat native trout. They never did. They never will. I was never able to tell them the slightest bit of it, not any of them."

So just try to give a little, fellow fishing-pigs of the world. Keep in mind that after twothirds of the vacation has been spent fishing, Mr. Lyons lets his wife decide what to do with the other third. Provided, of course, that the fish have stopped biting.

Mr. Lehmann-Haupt is a New York Times book reviewer.

An observer from outer space who embarked on a sociological comparison of the United States and Italy would collect some interesting if puzzling fragments of information. The Italians have older buildings but smaller cars, he would note, they use a spoon more in eating and they never play contracts of one club.

This last oddity exists because one club in Italy is always artificial and forcing, although not invariably strong, Whether the Italians lose anything by being unable to play in one club is not clear. When an American plays in one club he regrets it more often than not. The silence of both opponents is an ominous indication that they fancy their defensive prospects because they have the bulk of the clubs.

A case in point is the diagramed deal from a recent duplicate game. West had too much length and strength to bid over South's prepared club open-ing, which became the final contract Why North falled to respond one diamond with his six high-card points only he could say. As a result, his partner had to struggle in a three-three fit.

The South players in one notrump usually went down 100 points. In one club, East-West had a chance for a two-trick defeat worth 200 and a fine duplicate score. West defended skillfully.

There was no clearcut opening lead. His choice of the spade ace did no harm as it turned out, and allowed him to study the dummy at trick two.

It was clear that his partner did not have much, but there was a chance that he held the clul

Kentucky Derby Has Its Largest Field

From Wire Dispatches LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 2.-Twenty-three horses were enter : less than the 24-horse limit set ed today for Saturday's Kentucky ; yesterday by the Kentucky Rac-Derby, making it the largest field and the richest race in the classic's 100 year history.

A neavy rain petted the Churchill Downs course as owners and trainers officially entered their borses for a shot at the winner's purse of $274 000. The total prize money is $336,500.

The favored entry of trainer Woody Stephens received some mixed luck in the post-position draw for the mile and a quarter extraveganza. Judger owned by Seth Hancock and the stronger part of the entry, drew the No. 22 post, an uniavorable out-side position. Cannonade, owned by John Olin, will start second from the rail.

Agitate, the California Derby winner which will be ridden by Willie Shoemaker, drew the No. 1 post.

The two main topics of today's Derby talk were the size of the field, and the weather. Although the track was deep in mud, the weather forecast was for clear skies for Derby day.

Queen Has a Winner

NEWMARKET, England, May 2 (Reuters).—A filly owned by Queen Elizabeth held on in the stretch here today to win the 1,000 Guineas—the first of this season's English horse racing classics.

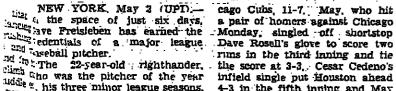

Highelere, a 12-to 1 shot, landed the £35,494 ($88,735) first prize by finishing a head in front of 4-to-1 favorite Polygamy. Mrs. Tiggywinkle, at 11-to-1, was third, four lengths back. Bitty Girl led the 15-horse field for the tirst half of the mile race, but with just more than a quarter of a mile to go. jockey Joe Mercer sent Highelere to the front. She appeared to be heading for an easy victory but then Pat Eddery and his mount, Polyganty, made their move, and it took a photograph to separate the two horses at the finish.

It was the Queen's third Classic success, her first in 16 years, and the fourth time that the royal colors had been carried to victory in this race. After the race, Lord Porchester, the Qucen's racing manager, said: "Splendid. The fully is likely to go to France for the Oaks. But she is also entered in the Prix Saint Alary as well as the Musidora Stakes and the English Oaks." Queen Elizabeth, who was standing nearby, quickly made a decision, for Lord Porchester added: "Her Majesty thinks Epsom might not suit Highelere's action and it is more likely that she will go for the French Oaks."

The Queen, smiling, spent several minutes in the winner's

Dallas Halts WFL Raid

WASHINGTON, May 2 (WP).
-A Texas state district judge. saying he was sorry that "physical attributes had finally become a matter of barter," ruled vesterday in Dallas that the World Football League cannot sign members of the National Foot-ball League Dallas Cowboys to future contracts.

Judge Charles Long thus granted the temporary injunction the Cowboys had sought against the embryonic interloper. WFL attorneys said they would appeal during the 20-day limit.

Almost two full days of testimony from Cowboy players. coaches and officials preceded Long's ruling. And before he made it, he took time out to deliver what he himself termed a sermon.

"As a court of equity we are concerned about the mores and what has taken place in commerce, business and particularly in the field of athletic endeavor," the judge said.

"It is to be regretted that physical ability and a proper appli-cation of wonderful physical attributes has finally become a matter of barter. Purchase and sale, if you please. "But reality must be faced and

"People who pay $100 to nominate a horse to the Derby know the law says the race will be run'according to Kentucky regulations," said May.

Asked if his group could change the rules so late in the game, he replied. "We think we can We just did." But with only 23 entries today, it became only an academic issue.

Trotter, who worked 11 years for the New York Racing Association, said his position would be the same for any Derby in the future. He favors a qualifying standard based on purse carnings or stakes performances.

Apparently, he was willing to put his job on the line over the

To encourage owners of some of the weaker 2-year-olds to skip the Derby, management has sweetened the pot for Saturday's 1 1/16-mile Twin Spires Pursepreceding the Derby-from $25,000 to $50,000. But the ploy didn't dissuade too many owners. As one horseman noted "No owner wants to tell his friends. There's my Twin Spires Horse."

In some prerace festivities, the Pegasus Parade, decked out with a theme of "Remember the Year." today saluted the Derby centenniel with a two-hour-long display of floats, bands and prancing baton-twirlers. Actually, Kentucky hardboots probably wouldn't bet on Pegasus. the winged horse of Greek mythology. First of all, he wasn't bred in Kentucky. And he never carried weight over a distance of ground.

The horses the hardboots are talking about are the ones that were raised in the Blue Grass state. Most of the top Derby contenders, as usual, are Kentuckybreds. Green bumper stickers with lettering hailing these home-town 3-year-olds are all over the place, the most popular being the one that says "I like Kentucky-bred Judger."

While the horses and their handlers awaited the big race, the track's famous tulips faded in the stretch like cheap claimers and were pulled up. Gardeners replaced 3,000 of the red and yellow tulips with red and pink geraniums in the fabled Tuhp Garden behind the clubbouse.

A Poor Showing Bv Brazil Team Raises Questions

SAO PAULO, Brazil, May 2 (AP).-There can be only two possible emplanations for Brazil's second consecutive poor showing: Coach Mario Zagallo is bluffing, or Brezil has a bad team.

There simply isn't any other convincing emplanation, or else the world champion Brazilians would never be able to give a more mediocre showing than the one they did Sunday in Rio. when they were held to a scoreless draw against Greece.

Last night here. Brazil played a scoreless tie against Austria. There was no teamwork. But those who know Zagalio well, and know of his talent as a coach, can only believe that he is bluffing.

WASHINGTON.—On Oct. 13, I felt it was worth the strain 1960, John Kennedy debated Richard Nixon on television, At the time the question of Harry Truman's cussing came up. Mr. Kennedy refused to apologize for Mr. Truman's salty language, but Mr. Nixon had strong feelings that a presthe United States ahould not curse. He said in part, "One thing I have noted as I have traveled around the country are the tremendous number of chil-Buchwald dren who come out to see the presidential candidates. I see mothers holding up their bables so they can see a man who might be president of the United States. I know Sen. Kennedy sees them too. It makes you realize that whoever is president is going to be a man that all children of America look up to or look down on, and I can only say I am very proud that President Eisenhower restored dignity and decency and, frankly. good language to the conduct of the presidency of the United

"And I only hope should I win this election that I could approach President Eisenhower in maintaining the dignity of the office, and see to it that whenever any mother or father talks to his child, he can look at the man in the White House, and whatever he may think of his policies, he will say, 'Well, there is a man who maintains the kind of standards personally that I would want my child to follow."

I must admit that even though it's been 14 years since Mr. Nixon said this I was very moved. Perhaps, I thought, for the first time in history this country would have a president who didn't cuss.

* * *

Although Mr. Nixon didn't make it in 1960, he did become President in 1968, and every time he drove by in the last five years I held up my son in my arms (he's now 20) and said, "There's a President who has the kind of standards I want you

Although Joel was rather heavy.

on my back,

You can imagine my despair and disillusionment when the transcripts of the presidential tapes were released and it turned out Mr. Nixon might have been the cussingest President in our history. Almost every other word had an "expletive deleted." and if you count the "inaudibles," and "unclears" and "ambiguous." it's enough to make a U.S. Marine top sergeant's hair stand

The question is what happened between the time Mr. Nixon debated Mr. Kennedy and the time he became President of the United States.

I sincerely believe Mr. Nixon was telling the truth when he said he was shocked by Harry Truman's language. I also believe in my heart he didn't start cussing until he lost the election to Mr. Kennedy.

A friend of Mr. Nimon told me, "I never heard Dick use an 'expletive deleted' until the 1960 Illinois results of the election came in. In 1962, he lost the race for governor in California, and he let out one 'inaudible' after another. I didn't know there were that many 'expletives' in the English language. It was hard after that to have Dick over to the house when the children were around.

"I thought when he became President and he was more secure he'd stop using 'expletives' but apparently once you start using them it's hard to give them up," the friend said.

And so it turns out that President Nixon was no better than Harry Truman when it came to language, and a lot worse than President Eisenhower. It's something we'll all have to get used to. But I know one thing-I'm no longer going to hold up my 20year-old son in my arms when the President drives by. Any president who promises to restore good language to the presidency and then talks the way he did is nothing but an "inaudible" in

A 1703 engraving showing the Jeruzalemkerk in Bruges, Belgium.

A Belgian Count and His Family Church

By Jan Sjöby

PRUGES, Belgium (IHT).-For centuries, people have wondered what the original Church of the Holy Sepulcher in Jerusalem looked like. Built by Crusaders in the early 12th century, the first church burned down. The present church was built in the mid-1500s.

The people of Bruges think they know how the original looked. At a corner in the east end of town where the Jeruzalemstraat solits into the Peperstraat and the Rodestraat stands the Jeruzalemkerk-the Church of Jerusalem, officially named the Church of the Holy Cross. Townsmen maintain that it is a true copy of the original sanctuary built over the empty tomb on Calvary. The Bruges church was built in 1427-28, after drawings brought back from the Holy Land by the brothers Pleter and Jaak Adornes, scions of a noble Genoese family who settled in West Flanders around 1270.

A casual visitor may wonder how the Crusaders may have hit upon the idea of building a church in what may be termed "Bruges Renaissance" style over the tomb in Jerusalem, some 300 years before that particular style of architecture had developed in faraway Flanders. Be that as it may, the Church of Jerusalem (authorized in a papal bull by Pope Martin V) has an atmosphere all its own.

"Not counting all the private chapels at chateaux and castles, this must be one of the very few privately owned churches in the world," said the present proprietor, Henry, Count of Limburg Stirum. "It has been in my family for more than four centuries, passed down by direct inheritance or marital liaison from 1427 on."

"It costs our family a fair amount an-nually to maintain the place," he added, "but if we have managed for some 400-odd years, chances are that we may manage for another four-odd centuries. We see it as a social and cultural responsibility."

The Adornes family stipulated, in the 1400s, that 133 masses should be celebrated each year and 133 masses are still read, about three times a week, by a retired parish priest from nearby St. Anne's Church.

The two-story main building (there an upper church and a lower church; is topped by an octagonal tower, in turn topped by a Polish-wedding-cake-type wooden campanile, a copper bulb, the cross of Malta and the broken wheel of St. Catherine. The Christian symbolism may seem somewhat vague but it makes sense to the 22 Apostoline nuns in the adjacent convent The inside is, as usual in Belgian sanctuaries, amply adorned with oils and sculptures Under the tower is a replica of the holy grave, complete with a crowned corpse of the Christ, in darkened wood. The major relic in the church is a splinter of the Cross, brought back from Jerusalem by Pieter's son Anselmo Adornes, after a pilgrimage to Jerusalem in 1471.

"We needn't take that piece of wood too seriousiy," commented the count, "If we pieced together all the chips in this end of the world, reportedly from the Cross, we would most likely have enough lumber to erect 10 crosses."

It will however, as usual, accompany the vial of the Holy Blood, allegedly containing a few drops of the blood of Jesus, at the Holy Blood Procession on Ascension Day, May 23 this year. That is one of the major events in the religious life in West Flanders.

Back of the church is a row of six Maisons Dieu-old-age homes for retired nuns and other pious women, each with its own chimney. The last resident died two years ago. The standard of the dwellings is rather primitive by present-day standards but the Count of Limburg Stirum indicated that plans are well under way to restore the premises.

Scouts Unprepared PEOPLE: For Hefner, Bunnies

There will be no Playboy Patrol at Bethany United Methodist Church in Atlanta. A group of 11 and 12-year-old Scouts sponsored by the church had written to Playboy publisher Hugh Hefner asking for permission to us the magazine's copyrighted emblem and flag for their troop. Playboy agreed and planned to take part in a ceremony today to the comedian. featuring four Playboy bunnies. But publicity about the plan brought a torrent of protest. Said Scout official Tom Uffelman: "Some people thought the name was funny in a tongue-in-cheek sort of way. But most of our groups are sponsored by churches. parent-teachers associations and the like, and they did not see any humor in it." Scoutmaster Jim Stephens thought it was "unfortunate that a number of people have perceived the boys' desire as

"unique and original emblem."

Informed diplomatic sources in London have told The New York Times that Walter Annen-berg, 66, U.S. ambassador to the Court of Saint James's, will give up his post soon-probably in July—and return to the United States for business and family reasons. He has been ambassador to Britain since 1969. Annenberg announced his retirement at the end of President Nixon's first term, then decided to stay on at the request of the President. The sources could not say who would succeed Annenberg, but a name being mentioned as a possibility is that of Rob-ert B. Anderson, the Texas oil executive who was once secretary of the Treasury.
